Acquisition of the Air Liquide Welding France robotics business

Through its CIMLEC Industrie subsidiary, Groupe Gorgé has just concluded the purchase of Air Liquide Welding France's robotics business (revenue of around €7 million; 53 employees). This department of Air Liquide Welding has equipped over 500 industrial customers with robotised facilities in sectors that complement CIMLEC Industrie's business activities.

The acquisition illustrates the Group's involvement in the "factory of the future" project, one of 34 priority blueprints presented by the government, and should make a telling contribution to the results posted by CIMLEC Industrie from 2014 onwards. It will also help to significantly grow the share of revenue produced by this subsidiary in its technology-intensive business activities.

Structure of the CIMLEC robotics business: Creation of the wholly-owned subsidiary Commercys Robotique.

To consolidate its expertise in the buoyant SME robotisation sector, the Group has organised its business product by creating Commercys Robotique, a wholly-owned subsidiary of CIMLEC Industrie, combining its own robotics business activities with those of Air Liquide Welding France.

For the record, CIMLEC Industrie has been an historic front-runner in this field and in the past 25 years has installed more than 15,000 robots. This operation should put the Group in an excellent position to take full advantage of a high-potential market.
